Meeting opens 16:49hrs

1. The mission statement of the Supreme Council and I.R.B

The mission statement for the Supreme Council and I.R.B. is read aloud by the Chair, John-Declan Flanagan for confirmation.

“To correct and set and hold The Position of the Sovereign Territory of Éire for the People of Ireland”

2. 1st Resolution before the Council

There appears to be a “blockage” in the W.I.S.E. project. They require leadership rather than a push. To that end, the resolution before the Council is that the Chair of the I.R.B. also become the temporary Chair of the E.R.B. and Josephine-Dolores become an advisor. With the authority of Envoy to the President, John-Declan will be able to apply the sovereign seal and Josephine-Dolores, as Chief Justice will have the authority to apply the Court seal.

The proposed method of creating a Supreme Council for the E.R.B. will be the same as in Ireland - seek nominations to support the Council, appoint members to the Supreme Council and then select members of the Executive.

Each would be expected to claim their sovereignty first.

Resolution passed unanimously.

3. 2nd Resolution before the Council

Putting State-owned land under E-I-R-E for the benefit of the People of Ireland. It is proposed that, under the Sovereignty claim, John-Declan as Envoy to the President would be the name claiming the allodial title.

Resolution passed unanimously.

4. Farmers meeting in Athlone 19-2-2023

The discussion didn't take place as the Secretary for Agriculture, Brendan K was not present.

5. Bank account for holding for EIRE fees

It is recognised that a bank account will be required to hold the payments for EIRE. It was proposed that the TMH Consulting account be used. John-Declan will consult his tax advisor to see how we can avoid paying VAT on the deposits. It was recognised that corporate tax will have to be paid but this is at a lower rate. For transparency, Kevin T will become a director in the company to have access to the account.

It was also proposed that the fee be termed a donation rather than a fee as people's ability to donate will vary. A guide sum of €555 for up to three (3) folios be paid and €111 per folio thereafter. A standard admin fee of €55 remains in place.

It is projected that the money generated from EIRE will fund the sovereign Dáil Courts and also allow for vouched expenses for the Supreme Council.

It is also projected that the workload for EIRE will be considerable, enough to have a full-time office and staff training.

6. Storage of important documents

Important documents are held in safekeeping in both Ballyvara House and The Mermaid House. A list of these documents will be shared between Eileen, Howard and John F.

7. EIRE.ie, EIRE.org, EIRE.com

3 domain names have been secured for EIRE for title claims made by sovereigns. The I.R.B. will be able to provide a true and certifiable copy of the claim for use in court. The various levels of interest of claim (e.g. legal, financial, beneficial) are not known by or obscured to the people at the moment. The importance of the claims on the websites is that the indigenous people's right to their land is recognised in international law. As the claims are in the public domain and are available in a 'reasonable search', searches made by auctioneers and solicitors for claims going back by 30 years show up in a search to fulfil the 'caveat emptor' (buyer beware) maxim of purchasing. It will also aid farmers in succession/probate.

The layout of the websites.

There will be tabs on the website with supporting documentation for proof of claim of the Irish territory for the People of Ireland spanning from 1916 to 2023. All claims will be made through Irish.

8. AOB

James Nestor has put himself forward for a place on the Supreme Council. Should availability present itself, the Supreme Council has voted unanimously that he be accepted.

Due to the upcoming workload on court cases and research required, it was agreed that Melissa K is provided with a home-office setup. Eamonn and Niall are to look at prices for portacabins and John F will speak with Brendan about services in the area (i.e. broadband providers).

Meeting closes 17:30hrs
